Page 53: Following the sentence 'Other major types include student revolts (N = 119) and disorders organized by Koreans (N = 98),' insert this paragraph:
Primarily through the utilization of content analysis techniques, prose accounts of disturbance contained in newspaper articles were coded into standardized symbols. In addition, the size, duration and intensity of each case of disturbance was computed and its overall magnitude score was determined on the basis of the following formula:

Page 54: Between the paragraph which ends with '... the pattern of land ownership had been more polarized' and the paragraph which commences with 'Because of the shortage of food ...', insert:
It is a widely held view that the reform was responsible for a radical increase in agricultural productivity. In the language of Ladejinski,¹¹ the chief architect of the reform, the 'private property instinct' of the farmers proved to be the prime incentive for improving the land. Yamada, a leading Marxist economist of agriculture, described the development of agricultural production after the reform as 'extra-ordinary' and claimed that it marked a 'point of periodization' in the modern history of agriculture.¹²
